Biographical sketch: Graeme Mount, PhD (1939-) moved from Montreal to Sudbury in 1969 to teach courses in Canadian, American, and Latin American history at Laurentian University. Upon his retirement in 2005, Mount remained actively involved in research and publication on politics in Latin America as well as on the history of Northern Ontario,

Scope and Content: The Graeme Mount fonds attests to Mount's different activities and achievements as a professor in the LU history department, as a researcher and as a member of the LU community. Many files concern his teaching activities: notes and texts for courses taught, field trips with students and colleagues, and travel logs are amongst the many teaching and research activities that are well documented. The fonds also contains many photographs taken on his travels. These include photos of a trip to South Korea and China in 1999 with LU faculty members, as well as photos taken in Chile and published in one of his books. Finally the fonds contains many research notes including copies of Consulate correspondence (originally 1910-1935) from the Department of State; files concerning the Ku Klux Klan; records from the closure of the Consular Agency in Sudbury as well as American Tourism via Sault Ste. Marie, World War I, economic matters and prohibition in the 1920's. Copies of archives from Monaco dating of 1838-1868 are also included.

Most of Mount's articles, papers and reports on Latin America's politics are also contained in the fonds. Recent acquisitions include documents on the history of Northern Ontario, and 6 photographs recording when a CPR train derailed and freight cars fell in the Wanapitae River in 2013.
